

Sarah Crayford Brown

Sarah qualified as a barrister in 1988 and spent 21 years prosecuting. In 2007, while the manager of a prosecution team, Sarah was selected and trained as one of the first in-house mediators within the CPS. As her experience as an internal mediator grew so did her passion for mediation as an effective way of resolving workplace disputes, and at the start of 2010, Sarah decided to set herself up as an independent mediator and founded Mediation in the Workplace Ltd.

Sarah's work includes mediating at all levels and within a wide range of organisations; training mediators and teaching children to mediate.
